OVERVIEW

CHALLENGE

A furnished office had to be cleared of cubicles and loose workplace contents. Dismantled systems needed to move through the retained interior without turning staged removal into uncontrolled clutter.

ASI APPROACH

ASI managed furniture-system disassembly and removal as one coordinated clearance assignment, moving from staged components to a cleared main office.

RESULTS

- Furniture cleared from the main office.
- Cubicle components dismantled for removal.
- Retained workplace surfaces remain in place.

FIRST AMERICAN TITLE | PHILADELPHIA

ASI brought furniture-system dismantling and office clearance together at the Philadelphia workplace. The assignment moved a furnished cubicle environment toward a clear main office footprint.

MAIN OFFICE FOOTPRINT

CONTROL THE COMPONENTS

Cubicle components were dismantled and staged for removal. Panels, furniture pieces and the working area had to be managed together rather than treated as unrelated pickup items.

WORK WITH THE RETAINED INTERIOR

The clearance took place around the existing walls, windows, columns and ceiling. The completed furniture-cleared footprint retains those permanent workplace features.

+ THE OUTCOME

A FURNISHED OFFICE CLEARED.
ONE CONNECTED REMOVAL SCOPE.

The main workplace footprint is clear of furniture, following cubicle dismantling and removal. ASI connected the working stages under one accountable office-clearance assignment.

DISMANTLE

CUBICLE SYSTEMS

Furniture panels and components were taken apart for the clearance.

REMOVE

WORKPLACE CONTENTS

Furniture and loose office items were managed through a coordinated removal scope.

CLEAR

MAIN OFFICE AREA

The resulting workplace footprint is free of the former furniture setting.

WHAT THE PROJECT DELIVERED

SYSTEM DISASSEMBLY

The cubicle environment was broken into manageable components for removal.

STAGED REMOVAL

Dismantled panels and furniture pieces were handled as part of the office-clearance sequence.

CLEARED FOOTPRINT

The main office is clear of furniture while retaining its existing fixed interior.

ONE ACCOUNTABLE PARTNER

ASI connected dismantling, furniture handling and clearance in one delivery scope.

FROM FURNITURE SYSTEMS TO A CLEAR FOOTPRINT.

DELIVERY RESULT

ASI managed the furniture-clearance assignment from cubicle disassembly through removal, giving the client one accountable partner for the cleared workplace footprint.
